morning from Colon, brought some news of the rebellion at the Isthmus.

When the Advance sailed from Colon martial law had just been declared by Commandante of the Port Perez, and every precaution was being taken by the authorities to prevent any outbreak of those in sympathy with the rebels.

According to Purser Robinson there was very little danger of this, as two United States warships, the Atlanta and Raleigh, and a French man-of-war were in the harbor, and other versels of the North Atlantic Squadron were expected there.
